Stablecoin neobank Fasset lands $1 billion valuation as SBI backs its payments push

The week opens on capital rather than checkout. Ripple puts money behind an RLUSD credit fund, Fasset lands a $1B valuation with SBI backing its payments push, and Blockradar crosses $1B in transaction volume. Behind them, ReconArt starts reconciling Solana remittances and agentic payments — the unglamorous half of the stack catching up.

Standard Chartered becomes the first bank distributor of HKDAP, unlocking real-economy uses for HKD stablecoins

A bank takes the distribution seat: Standard Chartered signs on as the first bank distributor of a Hong Kong dollar stablecoin platform, and Zand widens USDC access in global markets. On the plumbing side, WasabiCard adds payout coverage across 30+ currencies, TrustLinq wires Thunes into its settlement network, and Circle's partner network keeps growing.

Revolut to launch EURR stablecoin in push to expand crypto payments

Distribution is the story. Onafriq puts Circle's USDC into more than forty African markets, Revolut prepares a euro stablecoin for its own crypto payments, and Brydge and Monirates go after fees with zero-cost wallets. Elsewhere agents get purpose-built rails at Payouts.com and Casper, while Zerohash returns to the OCC for a national trust charter.

Shinhan Financial and Visa to jointly test stablecoin issuance, remittance and redemption

Asia moves to the consumer edge. Shinhan and Visa agree to test the full loop — issuance, remittance, redemption — while Anytap ships a USDT-loaded Visa card aimed at Korea, Japan and Indonesia. Around them EXOPAY, Crossmint and KiiChain work on the least glamorous obstacle left: getting money in and out without friction.

UK to give the Bank of England a formal mandate to support stablecoins and digital money

The week closes with the institutions. Britain hands the Bank of England an explicit mandate over stablecoins and digital money, and JPMorgan weighs issuing a coin of its own as the bank push accelerates. On the asset side Circle deploys natively on Plasma, Ondo's USDY goes live on Tempo, and GalaxyOne opens a credit line on Paxos rails.

What to keep watching

01 Banks stopped piloting and started distributing

Standard Chartered distributes HKD stablecoins, Shinhan tests issuance with Visa, JPMorgan weighs a coin of its own. The question moved from whether banks touch stablecoins to who owns the customer.

02 Agents are getting their own rails

Payouts.com with Casper, ReconArt on Solana, Rain's alliance carried forward — settlement and reconciliation are being rebuilt for payments a machine initiates.

03 The onramp is the product

Onafriq across 40+ African markets, Crossmint's global onramp, WasabiCard's 30+ currencies. Coverage, not issuance, is where this week's announcements competed.
